TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN,

I am an independent journalist (U.S. Citizen Passport #488029419). I have tickets to fly to Greece via Easyjet on July 22nd and need to verify that I will be admitted into the country. My purpose is both business and pleasure. We are scouting locations and investigating the story around the death of the EMPRESS SISI.

Recently I tried to fly to Ibiza (Spain) from the UK on Air France on July 15th and they refused to allow me to take my flight.

I was in self-quarantine in the UK from June 30th until July 15th (14 days of required quarantine). Therefore I should be allowed to fly to the EU as part of the Schengen treaty. I have already filled out the Greek Health form and will do so again within 48 hours prior to entry.

After being under self isolation per required by British regulations I technically (as related to Covid) should be classified as Covid-free and coming from the UK or Turkey if the concern is related to governments Covid response this should be sufficient to grant access. In other words my American citizenship should not supersede the country I am coming from or my current record of stay in that country. It is where you are coming from prior to entry that should matter to the EU countries not ones citizenship if COVID is the reason for denial of entry.

According to the above website Greece is open to U.S. travelers. However due to the problems I had recently at the UK airport I need to confirm I will be admitted into Greece on or before July 22nd. I am currently in Turkey.

Thank you for your help.

Best wishes,

Kerry
